Required Texts:

Feist, J., & Feist, G. J. (2006). Theories of personality (6th ed.). New York: McGraw Hill.

Recommended Reading:

Frankl, Viktor (2006). Man's Search for Meaning, Boston, Mass: Beacon Press.

Course Description:

This course focuses on the major models of personality including Psychoanalytic, Neoanalytic, Learning, Dispositional, and Humanistic-Existential. During the term we will examine these models and approaches, the major theories representative of each, each theory's methods and research, and will explore the assumptions about human nature which underlie each perspective. We will examine how people like Freud, Jung, Maslow, and others reached their conclusions about personality. In addition, we will apply various theories in an analysis of an individual of your choosing.

Assignments:

Thought Exercises:

Although issues pertaining to how human personalities develop and function are of interest to everyone and each person can make a substantial contribution to our discussion based on his or her own unique perspective, considerable reflection and effort is often necessary to really understand the complex theoretical issues that have been raised in this domain of psychological thought. To facilitate our class discussion of various issues, you'll be asked to think about (and struggle with) an issue or question in advance and prepare a 1-2 page summary of your ideas and questions to bring to the next class meeting.

There will be 9 Thought Exercises assigned during the semester. Thought Exercises are to be type and double-spaced, with 1" margins on all sides of the paper. You will bring the completed Thought Exercise to class so that you can refer to it during our discussion of the topic. At the conclusion of our class discussion, you will turn in your Thought Exercise for me to review. E-mailed Thought Exercises will not be accepted, nor will late papers. They must be brought with you to class every Monday and turned in at the end of the class period.

Each Thought Exercise will be graded on a scale of 0-10 points, based on the extent to which your response indicates that you have thought seriously about the issue. For example, you will receive only 5 points if you turn in an exercise that shows only a superficial analysis of the issue. You will receive 0 points for the exercise if you did not prepare it prior to coming to class or if your response is irrelevant to the issue. Your lowest grade will be dropped.

Video Analysis: The week before the final presentations are due, a video will be shown in class. The class will then work together first in small groups, and then as a class, to analyze one character from the movie. The assignment will be completed in class and be worth 20 points. This should help prepare you for the final project.

Analysis Presentation: The purpose of the analysis presentation is to provide you the opportunity to apply a major theorist from the major categories of personality theorists to a character of your choosing (this character could be from a book or movie. The character may be fictional or real). The presentation is worth 100 points and should be completed in a group. The presentation should last between 10 and 15 minutes. You are responsible for giving the instructor a one page outline of your presentation. Each presentation must include examples from the book and lecture to support your analysis. Also, include aspects of the character's personality or behavior that the theories do not adequately explain. Dates when the analysis presentation is due are listed on the syllabus. More will be explained in class.

Exams: There will be three exams in this course (not including the final exam). All exams will be weighted equally. The lowest exam grade will be dropped, thus a total of 2 exams will count toward your final grade in the course. Exams will primarily cover material since the previous exam. However, the final exam will be cumulative. Exams will be a combination of multiple choice, fill-in-the-blank, true-false and short answer/essay questions. You will be required to bring a scantron sheet (dark green) and two #2 pencils to each exam.

Make-up Exam Policy: There will be no make-up exams offered in this course. Instead, you will be permitted to drop your lowest exam grade of the four exams. Therefore, if you miss an exam for any reason, or perform poorly on an exam, you may simply drop that exam in lieu of completing a make-up exam. I WILL NOT entertain requests to allow you to make up an exam because you must miss it, but did poorly on a previous exam which you do not want to have count toward your final grade.

One Final Exam will be given: The Final exam will be cumulative and worth 200 points. It will be the same format as the prior tests. No Make UP FOR THIS EXAM WILL BE GIVEN

There will be a total of 600 pts

Thought Exercises: 10 points each (80)
